THE BOUNDARY QUESTION.

We publish below extracts from the correspondence recently had between our Minister and Lord Palmerston, and the preliminary remarks of the Globe, relative to our Boundary, by which it appears that no special minister is to be sent to England after all. The most important fact stated is that the English Government has sent, or is about sending, for the consideration of the President a draught of a convention for the purpose of regulating the proceedings of the Commissioners to be appointed by the two Governments, for the purpose of ascertaining to trace upon the ground itself the line of the treaty of 1783; and the undersigned is sending to Mr. Fox, for the consideration of the President, a draught of a Convention for the purpose of regulating the proceedings of the Commissioners to be appointed by the two Governments for this end; and her Majesty's Government hope that the report of these Commissioners will either settle the question at issue, or furnish the two Governments such information as may lead directly to a settlement. But this being the present state of the matter, it appears to Her Majesty's Government that a special envoy now sent from America would not, upon his arrival in this country, find anything to discuss or to settle in connection with this question, the discussion or settlement of which could be of importance commensurate with the expectations which such a mission would naturally excite on both sides of the Atlantic; and that if in consequence thereof, the envoy so sent were to return to the United States before the two Governments had finally settled the whole question, a disappointment might thereby be created, which, however unavoidable it would be, might, nevertheless, do great harm to both countries.

Her Majesty's Government having thus stated without reserve their impression upon this matter, leave the decision of it to the President; and the undersigned has only further to assure Mr. Stevenson, that her Majesty's Government are very sensible to the spirit of friendly confidence which has dictated Mr. Stevenson's course of action.

IMPROVING.

It is less than a month since the ice left our river and navigation was opened, and during that time over two hundred vessels have arrived, many of them heavily laden with merchandise, which has been landed here; the vessel is re-loaded with lumber and sail'd; yet the demand for vessels is very great, and as the lumber at the market has been engaged. The day morning a sharp rain commenced, and continued through the day and during most of the night.

This will give a new impulse to business, as those engaged in the trade will probably be enabled to get their logs down the river and manufacture lumber to market. It is gratifying to us to state that this important business has for the last year been conducted with great prudence and economy, and instead of sending money to New York to purchase flour to be consumed in the hutting swamp and by the log drivers and mill-men nearly the entire stock of flour is of the growth and manufacture of this and the neighboring counties. The amount of logs cut is not large compared with the demand for lumber, and steady prices may, with great confidence, be relied upon. The lumber trade, as is well known, forms an important portion of the means which contribute to the prosperity of our city, and we rejoice that present appearances and future prospects are so much in favor of this branch of productive business.

We notice that most of the stores that have been quite or nearly unoccupied for the last two years, have been rented and filled with goods, and again resume their former lively appearance. The stores in our city are now nearly all occupied, and should we judge from appearances, must be doing a very good and safe business.

The old system of giving every body credit for any article, has, in a great measure been abandoned, and small but sure gains will be realized instead of large nominal profits & empty purses.

Houses too, are in demand, and if the extravagant rents sometimes obtained for them here are not expected, the owners will derive a handsome remuneration for what some croakers were pleased to call dead property.

The season has been remarkably dry thus far, and uncommonly propitious to those farmers who depended upon a "burn" for obtaining crops.

The smoke has curled up from many brush heaps, and the prospects are charming for the success of the farmer.

Several new branches of manufacture have been commenced in the city and vicinity, and others have greatly enlarged their operations.

Messrs. Hinckley & Egery, who are engaged in the manufacture of Ray's Premium Plough, meet with great favor and high encouragement from our farmers, and we trust they will be so far sustained as to induce them to manufacture other articles of utility and necessity. The tanning establishment at Newport, now turns out ready tanned, about half a ton of leather each day.

We mention these facts merely as an indication of what is doing in the business of manufacturing.

Bangor appears like what her friends would have her, and the croaking of discontents has ceased. This is but the harbinger of her prosperity the faint streaks of light that gild the morning cloud, in prophecy of a glorious noon. In short, nature smiles benignantly upon us, business fans our citizens with a healthful breath, and all we need, and all we want is a change of men and measures in the general and state governments, and then "All's well".

Mr. A. STEVENSON.
23, PORTLAND PLACE, March 30, 1839.

Lord Palmerston to Mr. Stevenson.

Her Majesty's Government consider the communication which Mr. Stevenson has been instructed to make to the undersigned upon the subject of the proposed mission of a special envoy to England, as a fresh proof of the friendly disposition of the President, and of the frankness which it is hoped will always characterize the intercourse between the two Governments; and her Majesty's government hasten to reply to that communication in the same spirit, and with the same frankness. The President is desirous of knowing whether such a mission would be agreeable to her Majesty's government. & whether it would, in their opinion, be the means of hastening or facilitating the final adjustment of the controversy. That it would always be agreeable to her Majesty's Government to receive any person enjoying the confidence of the President, and sent hither to treat of matters affecting the interests of both countries, the undersigned is persuaded that the Government of the U. States cannot possibly doubt, but her Majesty's Government do not see that in the present state of the negotiation such a mission could be likely to hasten or facilitate the adjustment of the controversy. It was the wish of the British Government in 1831, when the award of the King of the Netherlands was given that any further negotiation which might be necessary upon this subject should be carried on in London. But the Government of the U. States expressed a strong desire that the seat of negotiation should be in Washington, and the British Government acquiesced in that arrangement.

Now the question at present to be considered is, whether any advantages would arise from transferring the negotiation to London.

Undoubtedly, if the state of the negotiations was such that the U. S. government were at liberty to arrive at a final and immediate settlement of the controversy, by a conventional division of the territory, & vice versa, many important and valuable advantages might arise from the mission proposed to be sent.

Suspicion Re cord. It is not the Collector of the port of New Orleans who has said "no," but the District Attorney, who has priced the funds of Uncle Sam to a large sum.

Now, if he began to sound a retreat, the first part of this message was very ill received, but to add to his blunder, he gave signs that he felt very ill, and wished for air - may be prepossessed in which he could retreat. Then Mr. Bobo

END OF THE FLORIDA WAR!

A copy from the New Orleans Bulletin of May 16, contains an account from Florida to the 13th ult. It appears that the preliminaries of a treaty of peace have been entered into with the Seminoles, and that Gen. Macomb has directed, that should any of the enemy present themselves at the military posts, they be treated with kindness and supplies of food be given. Thus it seems this troublesome, expensive and disgraceful war is about to be brought to a close. The stipulations of the treaty have not transpired but it is generally understood that the right of occupying their lands in Florida is reserved to the Indians. Should this prove to be the fact, the condition may be considered a surrender of the point in controversy and is an acknowledgment on the part of our Government, that "the Indians hold whip up us," and violated the terms of peace.

MELANCHOLY ACCIDENT.

The Valentine Floridian, of May 4, says, on Wednesday evening last, Mr. Wm. Kemble, of Maine, who had been employed during the winter, by Messrs. Kerr and Kirksey, accidentally fell into the hold of the brig Statira, at St. Mark's, on board of which Mr. Chapman had taken passage to New York. Medical aid was promptly procured, but the injury received caused his death in about 20 hours. Mr. Kemble was a very worthy, young man, of industrious habits and correct deportment. His remains were decently interred at St. Marks.

OFFICIAL.

From the Washington Globe of Friday
SPECIAL MINISTER TO ENGLAND.

The President has determined not to send a special minister to England at present, and we are permitted to publish the following extracts from the correspondence between Lord Palmerston and Mr. Stevenson's explanation of the views of the two Governments upon the subject:

Mr. Stevenson to Lord Palmerston.

Lord Palmerston has probably already been apprised that among the proceedings of the Congress of the United States at the close of its late session, provision was made for a special mission to Great Britain in relation to the subject of this controversy, should it, in the opinion of the President, be deemed advisable to appoint one. In virtue of this provision, the undersigned has now the honor of acquainting his Lordship that the President of the United States (desirous of conforming to the indicated wish of Congress) has directed him to announce to her Majesty's Government his willingness to institute such a mission, and change the place of negotiation which had heretofore been agreed on, from Washington to London; provided it should be agreeable to her Majesty's Government to do so and would, in their opinion, be the means of hastening or facilitating the final adjustment of the controversy.

In submitting this proposition of the President, which he has now the honor of doing, the undersigned flatters himself that Lord Palmerston will not fail to appreciate the motives which have influenced the President in making it, and see in it not only an additional proof of his desire to terminate amicably this protracted and painful controversy, but the earnest solicitude which he feels to place the relations of the two countries beyond the reach of those casualties by which, in the present state of things, they are so liable to be injured.

To this proposition the undersigned has been directed respectfully to urge the attention of her Majesty's Government.

The importance and urgency of bringing to a speedy close the pending negotiation, and the existing embarrassments in which the two countries are now placed, will, the undersigned persuades himself, sufficiently explain the earnestness with which he has pressed the subject upon the consideration of Lord Palmerston; and, in closing this note, he can but indulge the confident hope that the final determination of her Majesty's Government will not only correspond with the just expectations which are entertained by his own Government, but that it will be the means of leading to such an adjustment of the whole controversy as may be congenial with the just rights and honor of the two countries, and the peaceful and friendly relations, upon the preservation of which so essentially depend the prosperity and happiness of both.

A. STEVENSON.
23, PORTLAND PLACE, March 30, 1839.

Lord Palmerston to Mr. Stevenson.

Her Majesty's Government consider the communication which Mr. Stevenson has been instructed to make to the undersigned upon the subject of the proposed mission of a special envoy to England, as a fresh proof of the friendly disposition of the President, and of the frankness which it is hoped will always characterize the intercourse between the two Governments; and her Majesty's government hasten to reply to that communication in the same spirit, and with the same frankness. The President is desirous of knowing whether such a mission would be agreeable to her Majesty's government. & whether it would, in their opinion, be the means of hastening or facilitating the final adjustment of the controversy. That it would always be agreeable to her Majesty's Government to receive any person enjoying the confidence of the President, and sent hither to treat of matters affecting the interests of both countries, the undersigned is persuaded that the Government of the U. States cannot possibly doubt, but her Majesty's Government do not see that in the present state of the negotiation such a mission could be likely to hasten or facilitate the adjustment of the controversy. It was the wish of the British Government in 1831, when the award of the King of the Netherlands was given that any further negotiation which might be necessary upon this subject should be carried on in London. Suspicion Re cord. It is not the Collector of the port of New Orleans who has said "no," but the District Attorney, who has priced the funds of Uncle Sam to a large sum.

Now, if he began to sound a retreat, the first part of this message was very ill received, but to add to his blunder, he gave signs that he felt very ill, and wished for air - may be prepossessed in which he could retreat. Then Mr. Bobo of Paris, of the dominant party, as the organ of the N. E. Boundary Committee, introduced a Resolution into the House. This Resolution was the offspring of the loon-foco part of that Committee. Nor did it receive the approbation of the whig members of that body. This single Resolution (the first step taken in backing out), after the Governor had taken his message, was read by the Speaker. Mr. Delesdeneur of Bayleyville, a loon, opposed the Resolution, and said it did not come up to the spirit and recommendation of the Governor in his message. Mr. Moore of Waterville, a leading loon, then rose, and made a long speech in favor of the passage of this Resolution. He made use of every argument in his power to favor its passage through the House. Mr. Bradbury of N. Gloucester, a whig member, then rose as usual, not to speak of the merits or demerits of the Resolution, but to correct Mr. Delesdeneur in a matter of fact. He (Delesdeneur) had stated that this resolution did not come up to the spirit and recommendation of the Governor. To prove that it did so, Mr. Bradbury read from the Governor's message, and then read the Resolution. The Resolution was verbatim et literatim et punctuatim, like the Governor's message. It was in the same language precisely. He also said that he was not prepared to give an opinion upon the Resolution at that moment. He did not rise for that purpose but only to correct the gentleman from Bayleyville in his facts; but should he hereafter be called upon to express his opinion upon the Resolution he should say he thought it quite tame enough. Mr. Sheldon (whig) remarked that he was not prepared to give his opinion upon the Resolution, but he and Mr. Bradbury was perfectly correct in his statement, and Mr. Delesdeneur clearly in the wrong. No more was then said. The house adjourned until the next morning.

During the night, a wonderful change came over the spirit of the dream of these two Loons for leaders, Moore and Delesdeneur. When the House assembled in the morning, Delesdeneur moved to strike out the N. E. Boundary Committee's Resolution, and insert, by way of amendment, two Resolutions, the elaborate work of an evening compromise among the Loons. Mr. Moore willingly adopted these Resolutions instead of the one which he so strenuously advocated the day before. These two Resolutions, after being amended in some particulars, were passed, but not without two others introduced by Mr. Vose, (Whig) as amendments to them. The first of the latter (Mr. Vose's) Resolutions, recommending a Joint Commission for running and marking the line according to the Treaty of '33, and the second was in opposition to any thing like another arbitration.

All these Resolutions passed the House and went to the Senate. This body, in its wisdom, struck out Mr. Vose's Resolutions, and restored the others to their original shape, as they came from the hands of Delesdeneur. They were returned to the House thus amended, and there opposed by the Whigs, and finally passed by a party vote. The Whigs voting against the amendment and the Loons for them.

Thus passed these back-biting Resolutions.

The Whigs had no hand in this business, the Argus to the contrary, notwithstanding. The truth is, the Governor was glad of any excuse to back out. He asked instructions from the Legislature. He received those instructions from his own party. But his own political friends in the Legislature never once dreamed that he was about making such a bargain with Sir John Harvey as he did make, thought the agency of Gen. Scott. Had this proposition been submitted to the Legislature for approval, even the Governor's own party would have voted against it. Willing as they were to back out in a certain kind of way, they never would have consented to such terms as this agreement embodies. For the first time, during the whole history of the Boundary Question, Maine, or her Governor for her, has consented to give up a part of this territory, and all the British Government wanted.
